A PLEA FOR ASSASSINATION.

Rev. Hugh Pentecost does not grace the religion of the week and lowly founder of Christianity when he takes the rostrum and declares that the Czar of Russia ought to be assassinated. Such, it is said by telegraph, was the expression of the reverend gentleman on Friday night, at the New York meeting in protest against the Siberian outrages. Mr. Pentecost, in advancing assassination as a remedy, preached the gospel of hatred, revenge and passion. Where he finds the warrant in the Christian code for such advice we cannot fancy. Mr. Pentecost has disgraced his cloth; he has dishonored the pulpit, and has brought the religion of mercy, gentleness and loving-kindness into disrepute, for assassination is never justifiable, nor is its preaching defensible.

The enemy who strikes in the back, who slays in the dark or lies in ambush is the assassin; the enemy who confronts his foe and meets him in fair contest is entitled to regard the assassin can never command, no matter what the cause for which he strikes. To assassinate the present Czar would give place to another; it is the system that is at fault in Russia, and the assassination of a score of Czars will not correct it. Behind the Russian's "Little Father" is the Russian; he understands precisely what the Government is and what its methods. Perhaps the lower order of the peasantry may be kept in ignorance of most of the brutalities in Siberia, but the mass of the people of Russia are not ignorant of the treatment of Siberian prisoners. So long as the Russian people have this knowledge and do not protest against the atrocities, nor put a stop to them, as they may whenever so minded, they are the responsible power. True, the Czar is a hereditary prince, he is hedged about by an aristocracy of birth, and he is pampered by the royal traditions of centuries; but he nor the aristocracy can be said to be alone responsible for the Siberian shame, for no people in this day and age need remain under tyrannical rule.

We must not allow ourselves to indulge in the belief that the Russians are a down-trodden and crushed people; that they are absolutely subject to Imperial whim, or the whims of royal decree involuntarily.

On the contrary, the Russians are a shrewd and largely a cultivated and spirited people. It is loyalty to the Russian idea that makes them, save a small minority, the supporters of the Czar.

None can have greater abhorrence for the Siberian penal system of Russia than we; we can join fully in the demand that other nations should refuse to commune with the Government of the Czar as a protest against its cruelties; that humanity demands of civilized people that they express their abhorrence of Government persecution and brutality in Siberia; but to expect society to endorse assassination of the mere instruments of a system is to expect too much. When Rev. Mr. Pentecost preaches the gospel of dynamite and the bludgeon, he preaches murder; he advises men to deeds of blood without justification. He ought to know, and probably does, that in these days governmental systems are not overthrown by driving a knife between the ribs of the rulers, nor are the people of a great empire to be drawn into revolution by such means as he preaches. On the contrary, assassination of the rulers of Russia makes them martyrs and more absolutely rivets upon the nation the Siberian penal system.

THE INDEPENDENT MILITARY.

The National Guardsman announces that one line of policy it will pursue in 1890 will be advocacy of agitation for the abolition of all armed organizations outside of the State and National service. At first blush this sounds very American, but let us see it, indeed, it is. The Constitution affirms and guarantees the right of citizens to bear arms, and statesmanship has approved it as wise and far-seeing. Thus far, if we except the disgraceful attempted invasion of Canada by the Fenians, the independent military organizations in this country have proved helpful to the National Guard; they certainly have not constituted a menace to the Republic. There are a large number of schools into which military organization has been adopted with the very best results, and the Guardsman's crusade would include these. Nearly all the independent military organizations have proved to schools for the National Guard, and there are probably not a dozen in the United States that are not ambitious to be attached to or enrolled in the Guard. The spirit that suggests and maintains them without State or National aid, is precisely the spirit that the Government desires to foster. These private companies fit them, if not as well, yet nearly as well for actual service in time of need as does the National Guard. Generally they are composed of a class of men who, in all the qualities of good citizenship and loyalty to the Republic, are the peers of guardsmen. In the war for the Union these independent organizations, with scarcely an exception, supplied their quota of the earliest volunteers. Why, then, should independent military organizations be disengaged any more than the organization of fraternal bodies and secret societies? Unless some weighty and now suggested reasons are advanced for demanding the abolition of the independent military organizations of the country are advanced, the Guardsman will not have the approval of the people in its proposed crusade; but it may develop antagonisms to the National Guard that will impede the work of augmenting the concern of the State and National Governments for the organized militia.

WHATEVER may be thought of the remarkable quietude of the English Government in the matter of the Cleveland-street scandal, the coarseness of Labouchere in charging Salisbury with falsehood justified the penalty of suspension that was inflicted. A deliberative body must maintain its dignity, and Labouchere certainly infringed the rules of good breeding and of parliamentary propriety in the use of the language he employed in speaking of a Government Minister. But when this is said it is also to be added that the charge of Labouchere has placed the Ministry in a position that is anything but pleasant. The statement has gone undenied that when Somerset was charged with gross criminal lechery the office of Salisbury not only took no notice of it, but permitted the accused to leave the country and refused to act in the matter until the Prince of Wales interfered and protested to Lord Salisbury that the Government's inaction was outrageous. If it is true that Labouchere received the information from the Secretary of the Prince of Wales that Lord Salisbury connived at the escape of Somerset the heir apparent cannot avoid being drawn into a conflict with the Minister should Labouchere, when admitted to the floor of the Commons, reveal the source of his information. All in all, the situation of the Ministry is unequivocal and the result may be its overthrow.

The resignation of M. Constant from the French Cabinet, because of a reported quarrel with Premier Tardieu, probably means that the retired Minister means to oppose the policy of President Carnot, and that the quarrel was a mere pretext for retiring in good order from the Cabinet. It has been understood for some time that the Minister of the Interior desired to leave the Cabinet, and that it was his intention to antagonize the general policy of Tardieu. But if he wished to step out, why he could not have done so without the scandal of a row with another Minister, is what puzzles the American reader. It may be said, however, that this is the French style; the politicians of France always want a surface pretext for any action he takes that dissolves his relation with the Government. It has been demonstrated in a dozen cases that this is considered the only proper way of stepping out of the Cabinet. Mere dissent from the Government policy does not, to the Frenchman sufficient; he must create a dramatic situation, and signal his opposition with political pyrotechnics.

PRINCE BISMARCK is the master politician of the world. He has brought the Emperor over to his side, and has already laid the working plans for new political alignments that involve the abandonment of the National Liberals in favor of the party of the Center. He has made overtures to the Pope, that it is believed will bring the influence of the Vatican to his side, and this has been undertaken upon the proposal to restore to the church certain property sequestered during the Kulturkampf. Bismarck gives the Pope to understand that the Government will operate with the Church in the master of social progressive measures. In all probability Bismarck will save the Government from serious defeat, or indeed from any immediate defeat, but that the Imperial power has received a shock in the late elections from which it will never wholly recover, is undeniable.

ONCE more the American hog is to be admitted to German markets. The Imperial Government has designated one port at which American pork and pork products may come in, if they pass the gauntlet of Inspectors the Emperor's Government intends to concentrate there. It is now nearly fifteen years since the American quadruped hog has been refused the privilege of entering Germany, and the removal of the inhibition we may therefore infer, will be the source of unusual hilarity in Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis.

AMUSEMENTS.

At the Metropolitan Theater this and-morrow evening "The Postage Stamp" Company will appear in the musical farce comedy "A Social Session." The troupe is especially spoken of by Kansas City newspapermen, who, which performances were made, with several specialty performers, a good quarter and a large and superior company, and a full measure of fun, for which especially strong claims are made, for the musicals "Pythias" was written for "Dame in Speaking" of the role assumed by Mr. Ward Saturday night. In some cases it happened to write it, and was written improperly, than the correct title of the play known. It is a species of mental error that a printer sometimes experient, and set a word not in the copy, though the correct word is plainly before them.

"The Musical" in aid of THE MISSION FUND, which was postponed from February 20th, will be given at the Postage Stamp Company, 14th and M. Street, at the Congregational Church, Tuesday evening, March 4th, at 8 o'clock.

"The Merchant" professed "Christian" merchant; he helps to pay the pastor, but he ships rum to Africa and prays long and loud that God may convert the heathen. His neighbor sings in the choir "I want to be a saint" and the like. The saintly angels now sing "God took care of them; they sing the everlasting song of gladness. You will hear the arias of auseless life. As you sing you wait for the saintly angels now.
